

SAMPLE MEDIA RELEASE

July 20, 2007

MEDIA RELEASE

Contact:

Elizabeth Smith
222-555-5555

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

All Saints Anglican Church Announces Teaching Series

Atlanta, Georgia, July 20, 2007 -- All Saints Anglican Church, Atlanta, today announced plans for a new five-week teaching series on "The Power of Ancient...Future Worship." Sessions are scheduled each Wednesday, August 1 – 29, 2007, from 7:00 – 8:30 PM. Senior Pastor John Jones and Worship Director Martha Barnes will lead the interactive classes in the All Saints Discipleship Center, 333 Oak Avenue. Childcare will be provided for all ages.

"We hope to share the powerful impact of worship that is rooted in the ancient traditions of the earliest Christian Church but expressed in a contemporary, fresh way," Mrs. Barnes explained. "We hope participants will learn to appreciate the historic roots of our church while embracing worship designed to engage the senses and connect with people's hearts and minds."

All Saints provides a unique blend of the ancient and future in its worship as a means to capture the imagination of a society immersed in images of the media and Internet.

"Our church offers a wide variety and diversity in worship while upholding the Biblical and historic essentials of Christian faith," said Mr. Jones. "We encourage not only our members, but also those in our community who might be seeking a church home or are simply curious, to join us for this series."

"Come and see," he added.

All Saints Anglican Church was established in April 2005 and is affiliated with the Anglican Mission in America (AMiA). The congregation emphasizes relationships and service to the community. For more information about All Saints or the teaching series, call 222-555-5555 or visit the website, www.allsaintsatl.org.

###